

ECONOMIC IMPACT

AS MPC SUCCEEDS, THE PROSPERITY WE CREATE SPREADS WIDELY THROUGHOUT THE ECONOMY, POSITIVELY IMPACTING OUR MANY SHAREHOLDERS, BUSINESS PARTNERS, EMPLOYEES AND NEIGHBORS.

Investors

After only one full quarter of operating as an independent company, our board of directors increased the quarterly dividend we pay to shareholders by 25 percent, intentionally establishing MPC as a company focused on sharing our success with those who invest in our future.

Similarly, MPC's board also authorized a share buy-back of up to $2 billion, which not only returns that amount of capital to shareholders, but also increases the value of remaining shares.

Capital expenditures

Refining and marketing are capital-intensive business activities, and as such, MPC's operations generate an enormous amount of economic activity. Construction of new facilities and upgrading existing plants require skilled workers and large purchases of materials and services; our 2011 capital expenditures amounted to more than $1.3 billion, and our total for the five years ended Dec. 31, 2011, is almost $9.7 billion.

Payroll and procurement

Although our capital expenditures are significant, they are dwarfed by the amount of money MPC injects into the economy in order to keep its operations running smoothly and efficiently every day. For example, our investment in recruiting and retaining top-notch employees includes competitive compensation: our payroll was more than $1.1 billion in 2011. Our five-year total for payroll expenditures amounts to $5.4 billion through year-end 2011.

In addition to our investment in people, MPC's operations require purchases of thousands of goods and services on a daily basis. From the crude oil and other feedstocks that we process into fuels, to office furniture and computers, to electricity and communications services, our procurement expenditures amounted to more than $75 billion in 2011. Our five-year total adds up to more than $300 billion spent with thousands of businesses.

Taxes

At the same time, our operations generate significant tax revenue for federal, state and local governments. Income taxes on MPC's 2011 earnings amounted to more than $1.3 billion for these levels of government, and the fuels we sold generated another $5.1 billion in consumer excise taxes, which we are required to collect from customers and remit to the federal and state governments. MPC also pays other taxes and fees to federal, state and local government entities.

DIVIDENDS PAID

Second Half 2011: $160 million

Why it matters

Paying dividends is one of the primary ways we return capital to our shareholders, and therefore is a factor that investors weigh when deciding whether to purchase MPC stock. We regard stockholders as investors in our future, and as such, we carefully consider how to share our success with them.

How we improve

MPC is committed to returning capital to shareholders in a way that balances our need for liquidity and our desire to share our financial success with shareholders. After only one full quarter of operating as an independent company, MPC's board of directors increased the company's dividend by 25 percent. The dividend, as well as other methods of returning capital to shareholders, will be regularly evaluated by the board to optimize its balance.

COMPANY OWNERSHIP

MPC is owned by its shareholders, which include a broad range of investors. MPC shareholders are individuals as well as large and small institutions such as mutual funds, pension funds, banks, insurance companies, endowment funds and others. Directors and executive officers of MPC, on a combined basis, own less than one percent of MPC stock.*

Why it matters

We conduct our business for the benefit of all those who own MPC, and we believe that our many stakeholder groups should be informed about our ownership.

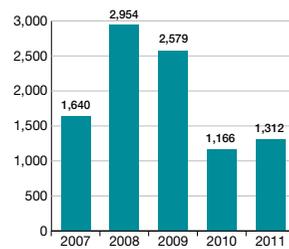

How we improve

We are committed to transparency and will continue to report on our ownership, including the level of ownership by MPC directors and executive officers.

* Information regarding the ownership of MPC stock by our directors and executive officers may be found under the heading "Security Ownership of Directors and Executive Officers" in our Proxy Statement for the 2012 Annual Meeting of Shareholders, as filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURES

Millions of Dollars

Why it matters

MPC's capital expenditures represent major investments in our ability to remain competitive, and also represent large injections of capital into communities where these investments are taking place. These typically take the form of workers hired, materials procured, services contracted and more.

How we improve

Our capital expenditures fluctuate based on a variety of factors, including how many strategic investments we are making in our existing assets and whether we are acquiring additional assets, such as the convenience stores we purchased in 2011 to integrate into our seven-state Speedway retail network. We are committed to ensuring that shareholders, employees and neighbors of our many facilities are aware of our capital expenditures by continuing to report these numbers as they are presented in this publication.

Above: Construction on the Detroit Heavy Oil Upgrade Project.
Below: MPC officers and members of the board of directors after the company's bell-ringing at the New York Stock Exchange.

*Federal Wage Base reported on employees' W-2 for the years indicated.

Why it matters

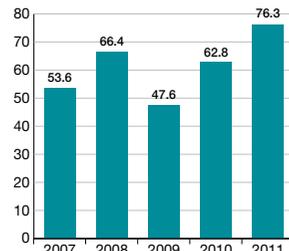

MPC is committed to recruiting and retaining the best workers available, and offers a compensation package that includes competitive pay as a primary component. Our payroll amount also represents a significant investment in the communities where our employees live and work, given the businesses they patronize for the goods and services of their daily lives.

How we improve

We continually evaluate our compensation relative to our competitors and the industries from which we draw our people.

TOTAL EXPENDITURES*
Billions of Dollars

*Includes capital expenditure items and payroll.

Why it matters

From crude oil to valves, and from advertising to employee benefits, MPC spends billions of dollars each month to keep the business operating effectively. We report this amount because we believe our stakeholders – shareholders, customers, neighbors and employees – should have an idea of the financial resources required to run our business. We also believe it's important to illustrate that when MPC is successful and thriving, it results in a significant multiplier effect in the broader economy.

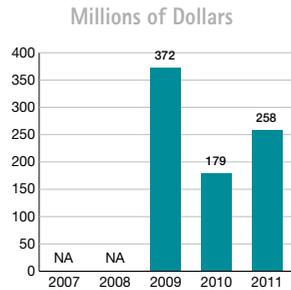

How we improve

MPC works to minimize its expenses responsibly within the framework of its operational requirements. However, the refining and marketing business typically requires significant expenditures on an ongoing basis to remain competitive in terms of safety, technology, security, energy efficiency, operational expertise and many other categories.

Left: The Garyville, La., refinery. Below: A Speedway store in Columbus, Ohio.

PROCUREMENT SPENDING WITH MWBEs*

*Includes discretionary and non-discretionary spending with minority- and women-owned business enterprises (MWBEs). MWBE spending amounts are included in the Total Expenditures amounts (also reported in this section), so these amounts are a subset of, and not in addition to, the Total Expenditures.

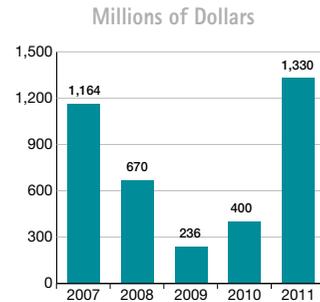

Why it matters

MPC is committed to building a diverse base of suppliers that reflect the communities to which we belong. This not only strengthens the communities where our employees live and work, but also allows us to benefit from the business advantages that come from a broader base of competitive suppliers – the innovative solutions and new perspectives that emerge from varied backgrounds. Toward achieving this goal, we measure the amount of procurement spending with minority- and women-owned business enterprises (MWBEs) as one indicator of our supplier diversity.

How we improve

A supplier diversity manager in MPC's Global Procurement organization oversees the company's commitment to ensuring a diverse base of suppliers. In addition to a network of internal supplier diversity advocates within Procurement and various other organizations throughout the company, we maintain a web-based portal for MWBEs to register as potential suppliers. This connects them to an online tool that we use to solicit bids from registered suppliers. We work with specialized agencies – such as the National Minority Supplier Development Council, the Women's Business Enterprise National Council and the U.S. Small Business Administration – to certify businesses as MWBEs.

INCOME TAX EXPENSES

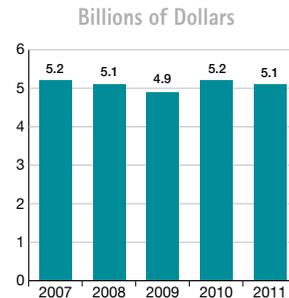

Why it matters

When MPC prospers, the federal and state governments, and the towns, cities, counties and parishes where MPC facilities operate, benefit from revenues for their priorities.

How we improve

MPC is committed to ensuring transparency in the amount of its income tax expenses, as presented in this publication.

CONSUMER EXCISE TAXES REMITTED

Why it matters

MPC is required by law to collect state and federal excise taxes on fuels we sell to consumers, and remit these taxes to the relevant government entities. We report this amount because it represents a significant portion of the price consumers pay for their fuel; as of January 2012, state and federal excise taxes averaged about $0.49 per gallon of gasoline, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

How we improve

We are committed to ensuring transparency in the amount of excise tax we collect from consumers and remit to the federal and state governments, as presented in this publication.

Left: A worker at Everbrite, an MWBE that manufactures most Marathon brand signage. Right: An Everbrite employee receives an MPC supplier award.

